

WHIG RALLY!

The stated meeting of the BURLINGTON CLAY CLUB, held on the first Monday of May, was adjourned to MONDAY, THE 13TH DAY OF MAY instant at 5 o'clock, P. M., to receive the Report of the Delegates to the Baltimore Convention.

The attendance of the friends of CLAY and FRELINGHUYSEN is especially requested.

GEO. A. ALLEN,
President.

E. A. STANSBURY, Secretary.

Mardi Gras

In Essex, on the 5th inst., by the Rev. P. H. Harver, Mr. SAMUEL A. FREEMAN, to Miss. ALMIRA A. STEVENS, all of Essex.

Wed.

In Williston, on Tuesday eve, 30th ult., Mrs. MARIA STANSBURY, aged 29 years.

In this village, on the 1st inst., of consumption, Mrs. MARIA E. wife of FREDERICK THAYER, aged 23 years. Heaven is a better place; we hold her happy, and heard her voice, and found it to be peaceful.

Prepared to walk with her through death's dark vale, And now here goes bright, and brighter still, Too bright for eyes to look upon, felled

With many tears, and closed her eyes, a cloud.

As the sun sets, and the stars appear,

Not down behind the darkened world, but hides

Oscured among the tempests of the sky,

Bath melts away into the light of heaven.

Printers in N. H. are requested, &c.

DISSOLUTION.

THE co-partnership here of existing between FISHER THAYER, CHARLES R. STEWART and JOHN D. STUART, is dissolved, and the firm, consisting of Stuarts, is assumed, and the law offices of the firm and its business, are to be conducted by

FISHER THAYER,
CHARLES R. STEWART,
JOHN G. DAGGETT.

Burlington, May 4, 1844.

CHAIRS! CHAINS!! CHAIRS!!!

CHARLES R. & STEWART

ESPECIALLY inform the public that they will be sold at their store, at the corner of Church St., two doors south of the County House, and feel warranted in saying that they can furnish as durable and durable an article in this line, as was ever made.

Please call and examine.

All kinds of Chairs, Settees, Settee-chairs, and seats made to order. Old Chairs repaired and painted at short notice. Country Furniture to be had in exchange for old articles.

JOHN G. DAGGETT,
CHARLES R. STEWART

Burlington, May 4, 1844.

RICH GOODS.

LOVELY & SEYMOUR.

Have also imported a rich assortment of

PAPER HANGINGS FROM PARIS, which they offer together with a good assortment of American Goods.

Church St., May 10, 1844.

SPRING GOODS.

LOVELY & SEYMOUR.

Have received a large assortment of goods, namely,

Broads, Hangings, Green Goods, Oil Cloth, French Martingales, Red & S. Elms Printed Damask Table-Covers, Carpets, Blotting and Thread, are the most valuable for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

LOVELY & SEYMOUR

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a precedent, it would be in the power of corrupt men, hereafter, if such there should be, to take advantage of the authority herein claimed, in order to give it numerical superiority. The question properly belonged, in his estimation, to the constituents of the Senator elect.

Mr Crittenden thought the suggestion of the Senator from Ohio well worthy of consideration.

The question was novel, and of great importance. He would, therefore, move that the credentials, the resolution, and the whole subject, be laid on the table until Monday next.

Mr Allen insisted that all the evils supposed by his colleague, to arise from the total exclusion of those who were entitled to seats here, would equally result from a temporary exclusion.

It was now necessary for delaying action in the case, when for ought we know, the resolution should be in the shape first proposed, and let the inquiry (touching his forehand) reach the head.

Mr Crittenden said this would be sufficient.

The resolution was then restored to its original form.

Mr Tappan was still opposed to it. He thought that, with such a